Alaska fruit trees

Less than 1/2 inch (1.27 cm) Use a saw to pruning branches for more mature fruits. Cut any branches that cross or rub with other branches, this opens up the middle of the tree so that sunlight can reach all the fruits, cut over the eyes or close to the joint in the branches. Do not cut the bottom of the joints from the stub. All cuts should be made at about 30 degrees angle. Branches above the twin opponents peaks (i.e. shoots originating from the same origin branch) If they grow in staggering fashion, the branches are strong, vertical branches rather than horizontal branches. Remove all peaks from around the bottom of the tree. Remove all debris and twigs from around trees because these diseases can stick and pests [source: BBC, Cesonoma].
